Hi there! my name is James. I have recently completed a Bachelor of Design Computing at the University of Sydney and I am very enthusiastic to apply my new skills in a dynamic and challenging role. As I am on the first step of my career, I am very open minded to almost all opportunities that may come my way, especially if the role is related to the development and study of human relationships with current and emerging technologies.

My personal qualities include

- Generation of quality visual communication
- Sophisticated computing knowledge
- Excellent communication skills
- Honest, reliable and organised
- Can work effectively in a group or autonomously
- Ability to handle pressure, deliver before deadlines

I am able to effectively use HTML, CSS and JS. I also have a thorough understanding of the technical possibilities and limitations that come with web development.

Design computing focuses on the experience a person has with constantly evolving systems of technology and I am thoroughly learned of the UX and HCI research, development and testing process.

It is through participatory design I aim to develop things that will harness such evolving technologies as to develop in turn a more inclusive, transparent and forward thinking global community.
